What's the matter Hon-ey there's a tear in your eye, Do Run and play my Hon-ey by the mal-ber-ry tree, Just white folks say you don't know where you go when you die? Come to your mam-my dear, Now stay right near the win-dow where your mam-my can see—now don't you feel so blue? For don't you fear—I will tell where col-ored chil-dren go when they leave here—

I love you, and the white folks told me Hon-ey, that they love you too—

There's a hap-py land a-bove the sky so blue And lis-ten child what's wait-ing for you,
If they speak a-bout the skies up o-ver head Just tell them dear what your mam-my said.
Chorus.

You lay your black kinky head in a bed on a pillow of white When you sleep tight!

The angels watch over you every night The griddle cakes pop from the ground With sweet molasses all around

Old Uncle Joe is playing tunes upon his old banjo The streets are all paved with gold I am told every bird in the skies has diamond eyes now ain't that nice so very nice

Every little kinky headed girl and boy has the cut-est silver pony for a toy In the place they call the Pick-a-ninny Paradise You lay your dice.
