Something new in newspapers in Mississippi, if you can call the thing a newspaper, is "The Southern Repose," the word repository is given by Webster as Obs., meaning rest, quiet. . . That's all there is in the unabridged addition. We have read several articles in the sheet and fail to come up with any idea as to what it's all about. Although no masthead appears in the waif, several articles are signed, as editor or publisher, Nathan Bedford Cooclose. The whole thing is fictitious, and it would appear is trying to criticize segregation as it is practiced. Who ever is putting the mess out will have to make their inferences stronger or few people will get through it. The whole thing mailed from Jackson, is a mess.
