People Struggling To Make A Living; Many Are Unable To Meet Tax Bills

Georgia people are tired of paying back-breaking taxes. They told us in the General Election of November 4 in no uncertain terms. They voted to kill every constitutional amendment which would extend the levying of any new or additional taxes or spending any more public money for education.

They even voted down an amendment to authorize the use of tax money to buy children's school lunches.

Principal Cases Rejected

The principal cases voted down were:

1. To permit the state and counties to levy taxes for school lunches.

2. To authorize the state and counties to levy taxes to support the Ordinarily balanced budget.

3. To permit the state to impose taxes for the support of the Peace Officers' retirement fund.

A Fair Interpretation of the Vote

The exact figures on the voting on these proposals were not available at the time of the writing of this article, but it is impossible to know the people, by a vote of 5 to 1, turned down every one of these propositions.

False Unions

The newspapers are wrong. They even voted down an amendment to authorize the state and counties to levy taxes for school lunches.

The other is written by a Negro who is an executive in the Circulation Department of the Philadelphia Bulletin in Pennsylvania. He entitles his article, "A Plea For Understanding." These two articles clearly demonstrate that the average person has no understanding of the problems involved in race mixing.

The Negro is absolutely unable to comprehend. He is like a child who is playing. Even the people who reside in the Northern cities and vote for integration candidates have no understanding of the problem. They simply run from the problem.

This girl from Milwaukee calls her high school Lakeside High School and here are two paragraphs from her article:

"Lakeside High School was in the path of progress. By progress is meant the gradual changing of the surrounding neighborhood from white to colored. This seems to happen almost everywhere when Negroes start to move into what was formerly an all-white area. The whole changing-over process takes approximately five years. The change that takes place in that period of time is astonishing. Despite the fact that the residents have lived there for years, when the change does start practically all the old residents will be gone in the space of five-years.

"Once the change starts, it picks up speed like a snowball rolling downhill. Within my four years at Lakeside, the proportion of white and colored students had almost exactly reversed. It was about two-thirds white when I entered, as a freshman and it was two-thirds colored when I graduated."

She has accurately described what is taking place in the Northern cities. The white people are running from the Negro as they would run from the plague.

They have segregation in the Northern cities. Their segregation is based entirely upon residence.

Some of these days they are not going to be able to run and when that time comes they will stand still and fight. They will then adopt the same attitude that the people of the South have adopted.

Now, the Negroes have this to say:

"We have in the U.S. today more-friendly-relations groups, more fellowship organizations, more 'brotherhood' agencies, more love-their-neighbor movements, more people speaking out forthrightly against segregation than ever before. Yet racial tensions and misunderstandings have never been so acute.

"Why? This is a question that profoundly concerns every one of us, white and Negro."

"Why, for instance, in the Northern city of Cincinnati, did voters suddenly change their way of voting when a Negro college student was elected to the school board?"

The Negroes who are writing these articles have always
