Welcome back, students, to this occupied force that was once a free school in a free land. The sweet memory of the proud and beautiful days that we lived in will always remain dear in the hearts of all of us who knew her in the days before she was infiltrated by pink and red and then reviled by the marxist felons.

The R. U. at this point wishes to congratulate and pay our respect to the gallant students who fought so valiantly and honorably for this school, this nation, its constitution and the ideals of individual liberty. Those who stood with the brick and bottle against the vicious, criminal goons who were sent here to kill, maim and destroy, deserve the highest compliments that can be paid to any group of their actions, in which they fought to save the honor of this school and this nation, they have placed themselves in the tattered ranks of those who have fought, bled, and died for liberty since time began. If the tide should ever turn, and America should once again become a free nation under Law, the history books of tomorrow will record the Battle that took place on this campus on the night of 30 Sept. 1962 as a turning point in the struggle between the free people of America and Bureaucratic Communism.

There has been an increasing tendency on the part of the established press to refer to the resistance organization on this campus as the "Rebel Underground". As we approach our third semester of publication we would like to clear up this point. The "Rebel Underground" in the Unofficial (there is no official) voice of the free students on the Ole Miss campus. It is a local reporting and editorializing organ of the movement which opposes bureaucratic slavery in the nation generally, and on this campus in particular. By no means is its being a force of the free and/or non-violent, but naturally, does not reject these as not being proper tools of Liberty when correctly employed.

One of the most interesting resistance groups that has arisen here on campus came to our attention several weeks before the holidays, and this is our first chance to make mention of it.
